Local gym suffers breakdown

Loss details

Nature of business Fitness Centre

Type of equipment Treadmills

Age of equipment Various A busy urban fitness centre suffered a power outage, and when the manager checked they found the power had tripped at the circuit breaker.

After re-setting the circuit breaker the manager noticed that some of the treadmills did not power up. After trying several reboots in vain, they called in the repairers to attend to the problem.

Most electronic equipment was unaffected as it was protected by a UPS and surge protected power boards, but 12 of the treadmills were not.

Deemed to be essential in providing adequate service to members, treadmills were temporarily brought in from their other locations in order to continue trading. All 12 Treadmills were repaired, with the replacement of motors and circuit boards required by each.

As a single event caused the breakdown of the 12 separate machines, the policy responded with one excess being applied.

Final loss

$20,800
